Lynn's life-long mission has been to make a difference in the lives of children! She began her professional development as a classroom teacher in the New York City school system, where she fostered an in-depth understanding of curriculum design, and the important relationships between student needs and learning styles. In her role as curriculum coordinator and educational consultant, Lynn soon expanded her sphere of influence to include sales, marketing and support services representing dozens of national publishers. As a result of her experiences, she founded Educational Media Enterprises, which offered training, consulting and support to administrators, teachers, parents, and students through distance learning through video conferencing by creating cutting-edge tools to motivate children to learn by doing.
